

-63A22 By Mayor F. Gordon Stronach, Mayor of the City of London, Ontario to
The Ontario Committee on Taxation.

It will be recalled that in October, 1963, the Association of Ontario Mayors and Reeves submitted a Brief to your august body and requested changes in the taxation structure as it affects property tax. I would specifically refer to the section regarding the administration of Justice and, owing to its brevity, quote hereunder:

"Municipalities are required by statute to provide the jails and lock-ups, to pay the salaries of the jail guards, to pay for court houses for the county and supreme courts, to pay coroners, pathologists, post mortem and inquest fees, to pay for witnesses and jurors, to provide accommodation for Division Courts, Magistrates Courts, Federal Admiralty Courts and Tax Appeal Tribunals, to pay magistrates and their staffs, to provide accommodation for a legal law library for lawyers, to provide for transportation of prisoners, the administration of and accommodation for juvenile and family courts and other expenses related to the administration of Justice. To all of these, this Association strongly objects. There are a few by-law enforcement cases that come before the Magistrates' Courts which could be said to be the responsibility of municipalities but otherwise they have no responsibility except to pay. Magistrates, judges and coroners are not employed or appointed by municipalities.

The revenue derived from fines and forfeitures by municipalities is minute compared to the expense involved. As the municipalities pay the police who enforce the laws of Canada and of the Province they may still have a claim to a share in the revenue derived. Our Association in annual general meeting has resolved that the Province be urged again to assume the entire cost of the Administration of Justice including the construction and maintenance of Court Houses and Jails and the administration of juvenile and family courts."

In this two year interval, through my continued association with fellow mayors of the Province, there is a general feeling that the revenue derived from registry offices, court houses, etc., is by no means minute but, as the bulk of this is disbursed to the province, there is very little left for the municipalities and it is, therefore, felt that the municipalities are prepared to give up any such revenue. There is one difference, however, and that is that the municipalities are making no attempt whatsoever to shun the responsibility of administration of Justice in the municipality or Magistrates' Courts; likewise, accepting full responsibility for the provision of police services and the like, for the protection of persons and property.

There is a prime need, throughout the province, for modern accommodation of court houses for the superior courts, registry offices and jail accommodation. So long as the financial responsibility remains as it is in its present form, it is not likely that the municipalities will be able to carry out their duties. Of course, it is pointed out that a completely different arrangement prevails in the newer parts of the province that do not have the county system government because the province, in such areas, does take complete responsibility for the provision of such accommodation. In the London situation, if such could be taken as an example in respect to revenue, from the total revenue received from the administration of Justice, exclusive of that in the lower or Magistrate's level, $482,601.67, received, the distribution was broken down as follows:

Province of Ontario	$408,597.68
City of London	56,810.14
County of Middlesex	17,193.85
	$482,601.67

A recent news release, contained in the Globe & Mail, carried excerpts from the speech of Mr. W. B. Common, formerly deputy attorney general of Ontario and now personal counsel to the Ontario Law Reform Commission. Owing to Mr. Common's stature and familiarity with this problem, I am taking the liberty of quoting this news article:

"The province should enact an administration of justice act which would make it solely responsible for the cost of building court houses and paying the required salaries. It would also provide for fines and other court revenues to be funnelled into provincial coffers."

It appears that, should the province take over the financial responsibility for superior court houses, registry offices, jails, etc., the task would provide no great hardship in the light of the revenue received from such services. In the event, however, that additional revenue is required, possibly the old Mortgage Tax Act should be reinstated. It only applied to municipalities of over 200,000, but even so, only three took advantage of it. A brief history of this Act is as follows:

The Mortgage Tax Act was first enacted as part of The Statute Law Amendment Act in 1918 (8 George V, Chapter 20, Section 70). This probably explains why it escaped the attention of so many municipalities. It was amended in 1919 (9 George V, Chapter 25, Section 37). It first appeared under the name of The Mortgage Tax Act in R.S.O. 1927, Chapter 156 and remained in that form in R.S.O. 1937, Chapter 172 and R.S.O. 1950, Chapter 240.

It was repealed in 1953 by "An Act to Repeal The Mortgage Tax Act" (2 Elizabeth, Chapter 67). It would seem that Toronto, Hamilton and York County were the only municipalities to take advantage of this Act and it is interesting to note that the Repealing Act provided for payment "out of such monies as may be appropriated therefore by the Legislature" of (a) $130,000 to The County of York; (b) $80,000 to the City of Toronto; (c) $30,000 to the City of Hamilton.

I am enclosing a photo copy of the Mortgage Tax Act R.S.O. 1950, Chapter 240 which is the form in which it stood before its repeal.

You will note that the Act called for a tax of 1/10th of 1% which is one-half of the amount required under the Land Transfer Tax Act.

If a mortgage tax were imposed, I would suggest 2/5ths of 1% which would be $4.00 per $1,000 on the face amount of every mortgage.

Revenue could be supplemented by the imposition of an additional fee ($1.00 per $1,000) on estates of all persons whose estate were probated or filed for administration in the Surrogate Court. Revenue could also be supplemented by an extra $1.00 on all Writs issued, as well as Mechanic's Liens filed.

From the foregoing it can be readily seen that sufficient revenue would be forthcoming to pay for any debenture debt occasioned by the construction of combined court houses and registry offices, as well as provincial jails. It would also have the advantage of requiring the people who take advantage of these facilities to pay for same rather than putting an additional tax on the land owner.

Respectfully submitted,
